They have not already bought
these formulas somewhere else.

WHERE THE CASE LIVES

1 Checkout counter, at eye level, not behind the desk.

A case a patient cannot reach is a case a patient will not ask about.

2 Keep the Fruits & Greens open and mixable.

One shaker bottle and a jug of water next to the case is worth more than any brochure.

3 Face the labels forward and keep one of each visible.

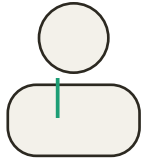

When a row goes empty, that is the reorder signal, not the invoice.

NOTHING BEHIND THE DESK.

If your front desk has to turn around to get it, it will not get sold.

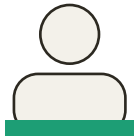

WHAT TO SAY

Do not sell it. Prescribe it the way you would prescribe anything else, and hand it over before the patient leaves the room.

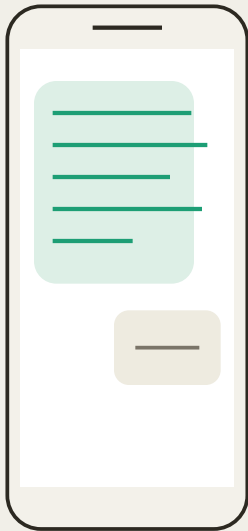

IN THE EXAM ROOM

"Based on what we just went over, I want you starting on this today, not next week. It is the one I keep in the office because I want to know exactly what you are taking. Grab it at the front and I will check in with you at your next visit to see how you are doing on it."

AT THE FRONT DESK

"That is the one Dr. _____ keeps here. I can bag it for you now, or you can order it online under our practice name."

THE TEXT AFTER THE VISIT

"Hi, this is _____. Here is the one Dr. _____ talked about today. You can pick it up at the front desk, or order it online here: [your store link]. We will check in at your next visit."

Send it the same day. Copy it as written, then put your practice name and your store link in the blanks.

- 1 Said in the room.
- 2 Said at the desk.
- 3 Texted the same day.

A FRONT DESK THAT CAN ANSWER ONE QUESTION

outsells a doctor who recommends and walks away. Give them ten minutes with this page.

Pick the rung that fits where you are.

WHAT THREE A DAY LOOKS LIKE

THE PRACTICE MATH

Three patients a day, two bottles each, twenty clinic days. Here is what that is.

ONE MONTH OF CLINIC DAYS · EACH COLUMN IS ONE DAY

$$\begin{array}{ccccccc} 3 & \times & 2 & \times & 20 & = & 120 \\ \text{patients a day} & & \text{bottles each} & & \text{clinic days} & & \text{bottles a month} \end{array}$$

OR THE SAME 120 THE OTHER WAY: SIXTY PATIENTS ON A STANDING TWO-BOTTLE PROTOCOL

The online store fills the gap between the patients you see in the office and the patients who reorder from home.

THEY GET BETTER. THAT IS THE REASON.

The math is what makes it sustainable to keep being the practice that finds those answers.
